DAILY ARGUS.

C. MACARDILL.
PUBLISHER.
GEORGE E. THOMPSON.
F. F. ROBINSON.
WEDNESDAY, MAY 2, 1914.

The convention to revise the constitution of the State, which will meet next week, is the seventh convention of the kind that has been held. The others were held in 1777, 1788, 1801, 1821, 1848 and 1867.

The question of Harrison's candidacy in 1916 seems to be settled. Harry S. New, editor of the Indianapolis Journal, who is near to the human iceberg as any one can get, says "Mr. Harrison is not only a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1916, but he will be the next nominee."

Attention is called to the fact that although contingents of Coxeites are making for Washington from all parts of the country, there are none coming up from the south. That section had enough of the "on to Washington" movement in the early sixties to last it for all time, and although it is the most impoverished section, its people are applying the only remedy for poverty that the world will ever know, good hard, honest work.

The Coxei fiasco at Washington, yesterday, has disgusted "General" Kelly and he speaks his mind with a frankness that is nothing but rank insubordination. He says that if Coxei had had any capacity for leadership he would not have forced his movement at this time. "His only hope of success was to fall in with me. The whole West and especially the laboring element is with me and my men in our mission, and Western members of Congress will be ready to aid us when we get to Washington. Congress would not take up Coxei's cause because he had only a little squad of Eastern men." The "General" added that Coxei's fiasco would not prevent him and his army from continuing their journey to Washington.

It is expected that $1,000,000 of gold will be shipped to Europe, today, and it is estimated that at least $3,000,000 more will go out, Thursday and Saturday. The amount of free gold in the Treasury is only $100,000,000 and to-day's shipment will eat into the reserve which was raised to $100,000,000 by the sale of $50,000,000 government bonds. Shipments of gold are always incident to this season of the year, and there is no occasion for alarm.

The Washington police rendered the cause of good government a real service, yesterday, by the promptness with which they suppressed Coxei before he could harangue the crowd at the Capitol, and by the neatness and dispatch with which they jelled the truculent Marshal Browne and "moved on" the burlesque army. The whole affair was admirably managed. Coxei and his tatterdemalions were allowed every right that is accorded other citizens, and there was no interference with them until an attempt was made to violate just and reasonable regulations for the preservation of peace and public order. Nothing was done that could warrant Coxei in assuming the role of martyr, and yet the supremacy of the law over so-called armies of alleged workmen, who do not want work, was made so plain that all the gangs of vagrants who are bushwhacking in the West must realize that if they reach Washington, "petitions in boots" are not any more effective than petitions presented in the regular way, and that so-called "industrial armies" have no greater rights and privileges than other American citizens.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.
Who is to lecture at the Casino, next Sunday evening.
Among the sayings of Mr. Ingersoll none has caused more widespread attention than the following, which we clip from an exchange:
Bob Ingersoll repudiates the saying that "death ends all." He says: "I hope for all good, for all joy, for the children of men. All I can say about immortality is this: There was a time, when I was not; after that I was, now I am, and it may be no more wonderful that I should continue forever, now that I have a start, than it was that I should begin. We love, and those we love die, and we cling to the hope, to the wish, that we may meet again. Love was the first to dream of immortality, and as long as we love we shall hope." It looks as if the bitter skepticism of former days was losing its grip upon the old gentleman, and giving way to a more kindly agnosticism that almost touches faith.

The committee, which had investigated the matter, recommended that the road be sold under foreclosure and that a bondholders' syndicate be formed to purchase it. This plan was approved and the committee was authorized to carry it into effect.
